For various reasons, both well-intentioned and pragmatic, parents often fill children’s days with activity. Now that families are sheltering in place, some children have moved their activities to zoom rooms, while others have had lots of unstructured time. Given the cultural pressures to enroll children in classes and on teams, this down time may feel like a loss. Join us for an in-depth look at the value of unstructured and unscheduled time for children, especially in the COVID era where many of our hours are spent in the home.

These events are open to adults of the Bing Nursery School Community.
